Printing Process Dye Sublimation

Dye sublimation printing involves the use of a digital printer to produce a print on sublimation transfer paper. The sublimation paper is then placed into a heat press with the marquee fabric and exposed to a temperature of 200 degrees Celsius. The artwork is then transferred from the paper to the marquee fabric. The marquee fabric has the artwork embedded in the material and the design will not scratch from the surface. The fabric has a matte finish, which photographs well and suits indoor and outdoor use.

Colours Pantone Matching

All printing is done using CMYK on a large format printer. Pantone colours / PMS can be supplied and they will be converted to a CMYK breakdown for digital printing. Please state to your graphics Coordinator if you require colour matching to either a Pantone or a physical sample. While we make every effort to match Pantone colour, slight variation can occur. Please also keep in mind that colours displayed on a device or monitor can differ from the printed product. While every effort is made to match colours between product types, there can be variation between colour from polyester marquee fabrics, to PVC material and banner fabrics.
